John Van Sciver is a Professional Engineer, and has been with the State of Colorado Department of Natural Resources since 1977. He worked in the State Engineers Office for 15 years, gained knowledge about water resources infrastructure in Colorado, and obtained an advanced degree in finance. In 1993 he started work with the Colorado Water Conservation Board, and is Marketing Director for the Board's Low Interest Loan Program for Raw Water Projects.

Abstract of presentation:

The Colorado Water Conservation Board (CWCB) Construction Fund has been available since 1971 when the Colorado General Assembly decided that the State should provide low interest loans for the development of water resource projects. As of 2003, approximately $235 million in loans have been made to help finance 245 locally-sponsored projects. A slide presentation will provide examples of projects financed, and explain the loan application process.
